That's something you might have to shed a little I find that this piece allows for a lot of freedom in improvisation.. You can hear it on the When I play gigs as a leader, I often simply start this riff and the other musicians come in whenever they are ready.. We often default to the popular "fake book key" of E minor, so guitarists, beware! If you want to avoid a little surprise or a bad experience at a jam session, make sure you learn it in both keys like the grown-ups do! It's also advisable to learn the classic introduction to Autumn Leaves.. It was composed by Joseph Kosma in 1946 for the movie, "" The original title was Les Feuilles Mortes (in French, please!) and the lyrics and title were later added by Johnny Mercer in 1949.. It's simply a bass riff that goes 1-b3-5-6 (and back down), defining a Gm6 chord.
